Samuraí Sword Hand Forging Process

No edged weapon in history has ever been surrounded with such Mystique and tradition like the Japanese sword. The sword is so closely associated with the Japanese samurai that it became known as the "soul of the samurai". It was both weapon and symbol, forged as a religious act and wielded with superhuman skill. A sword forged by a celebrated master was one of the most prized gifts that a warrior could receive.

For more than 2600 years, the "City of Treasure Sword", Longquan, is known for making the best swords in the world. Located within the border of South Zhejiang, China and under the Fengyang Mountain, Longquan is rich in resources that are suitable for crafting swords.

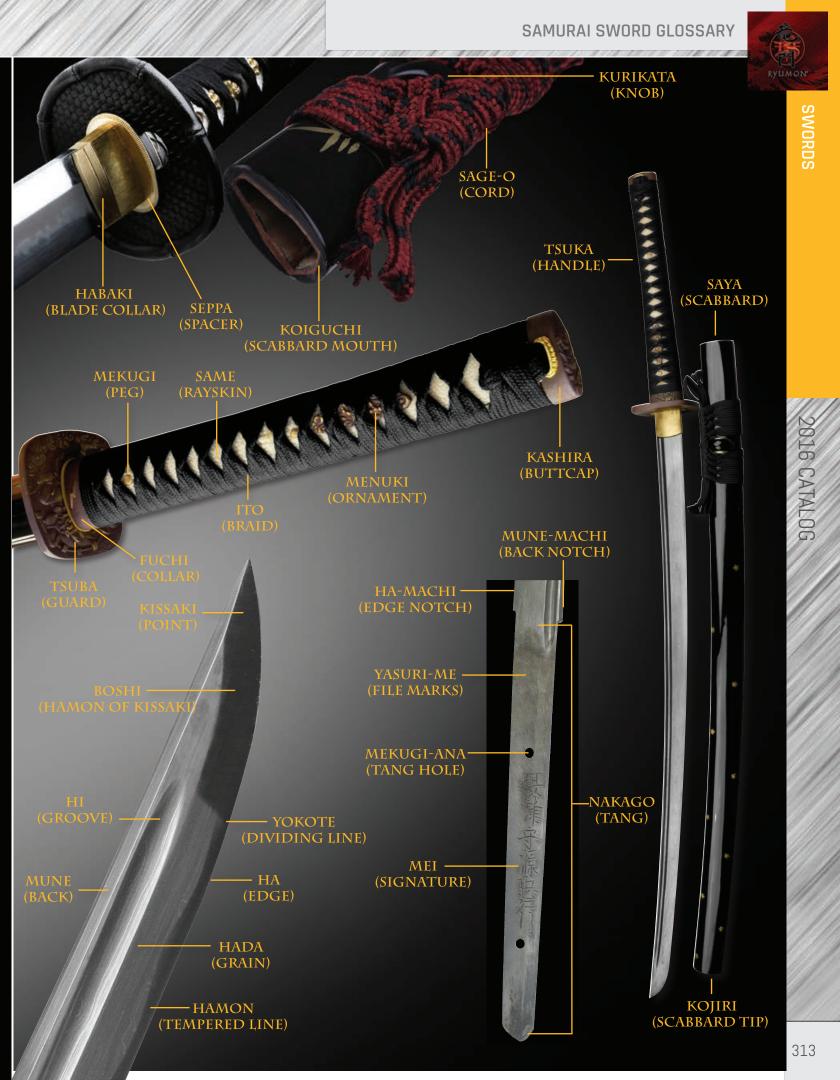

During the period of Warring States (770-476 B.C.), a famous sword maker named Ou Yezi created the most renowned sword in Longquan. Since then, the secret arts of crafting swords have been passed down from generation to generation.

Ryumon and Ten Ryuswords are hand forged by master craftsmen with years of experience from Longquan. These master sword smiths combine modern knowledge with traditional secrets to produce superior quality swords with enhanced durability, sharpness, and exquisite craftsmanship.

Ten Ryu

The Ryumon Raijin Katana has a hand forged and folded AISI 1060 carbon steel blade meticulously crafted for a Damascus look. Heat treated with traditional processes, the razor sharp edge has a hardness of roughly ~57Rc and a softer spine (~45Rc) to absorb shocks. A one-piece brass construction habaki (blade collar) enables the blade to fit securely into the saya (scabbard). The tsuba (guard) of this sword features a reproduction of "Raijin" (the god of thunder), based on the work of Tawaraya Sotatsu, a master painter of the Edo period. The saya (scabbard) is lacquer to a super high gloss finish with inlaid brass sakura (cherry blossom flower). Authentic ray skin (same) is used to wrap the tsuka (handle). Both the sage-o and ito are woven from imported Japanese silk for a sleek and elegant look. The koiguchi (scabbard mouth) and kojiri (scabbard tip) are made with genuine water buffalo horn.

Each sword comes complete with hang tag, a silk sword bag, a cleaning kit, a reference guide, and a certificate of authenticity all packaged in a graphic box.
